Do you know that the first high-heeled shoes were worn by a man, not a woman? The high-heeled shoes were designed for King Louis XIV of France. The king often felt embarrassed because he was very short. So he asked his shoe-maker to make a pair of shoes with very high heels. Other men and women soon followed, and wearing high-heeled shoes became a way to show off. Later, men stopped wearing high-heeled shoes, but women kept wearing them. In fact, some shoes got too high for those women to walk in. They needed to have other people to help them move around. So wearing high-heeled shoes became a way for women to show other people they were rich.

They are here to stay. Perhaps you can see people reading them all the time. You might see them on the MRT, or on your way to school or work. We are talking about e-books.

To read an e-book, you need a special computer called a reader. Most people use a Kindle or an iPad. They both cost a lot or may be broken easily, but people still buy them. In fact, with either of them, many older books are free and some companies are selling more e-books than paper books.

Why do people like e-books? First, e-book readers are small and easy to carry and use. You may not know it, but a Kindle is only the size of a small notebook and can hold about 1,500 books. Besides, e-book readers can do a lot of new and interesting things. For example, if you see a word that you do not understand, most e-book readers can tell you the meaning of that word. If you want to read your book in another language, your e-book reader may also do that, too.

By Jordan Robertson

CUPERTINO, California --- Steve Jobs, who invented and sold many of the products that have changed our everyday life---from the earliest personal computers to the iPod, iPhone and iPad---has died. He was 56.

We will always remember such a strong image of the hero's own, that of a thin man always in blue jeans, sports shoes, and a black mock turtleneck.

“The world is really better because of Steve.”

Jobs, who did not even finish his college, started Apple with a high school friend in 1976 but was asked to be out ten years later. However, he returned back in 1997 to save the company. After Jobs moved back to Apple, he grew it and turned it into one of the best companies in the world.

Perhaps the most important is that Jobs in 2001 invented the iPod, which gave “1,000 songs in your pocket.” It came with white earphones and was easy to use with fingers, and quickly became fashionable. In 2007 appeared the touch-screen iPhone, which changed cell-phones from just a telephone into a tool for much more: making money, editing photos, playing games, and getting on social network. Then, by 2011, Jobs introduced the iPad, a tablet-sized, all-touch computer that also got so popular.
