Yani Tseng becomes world No.1

Taiwanese golfer Yani Tseng became the world's No.1 female golfer after winning the Australian Ladies Masters on February 13, 2011, with a four-day total of 264.

"I knew I could become world No. 1 sooner or later but did not expect it to happen so soon," said Tseng, who wore a pink polo shirt on the course and asked fans in an earlier Facebook post to wear the same color to wish her good luck.

Yani Tseng, who was born on January 23, 1989, has been thought as one of the best golfers in the world for a long time. In fact, Yani Tseng's father found her daughter was interested in golf when she was five. Since then, Yani Tseng has been training with a coach. When her classmates were playing together, she needed to practice for a long time. In 2001, she won her first championship in an important game. After that, she became a famous player. However, Yani Tseng didn't do well from 2009 to 2010 because she cared too much about how she did in every game. Luckily, that wasn't troubling to her for a long time. In August, 2010, she won LPGA, one of the most important golf games in the world. Yani Tseng is a famous player, but she is still hard-working. Maybe that is why she can be so successful.

The largest earthquake to hit Japan in recorded history

The biggest earthquake on record to hit Japan on March 11, 2011, and the tsunami that followed killed thousands of people and swept away everything in its path, including houses, ships and cars.

The magnitude 9.0 earthquake, the most powerful since Japan started keeping records 140 years ago.

"I was terrified and I'm still frightened," said Hidekatsu Hata, 36, the manager of a Chinese noodle restaurant in Tokyo, where buildings shook violently. "I've never experienced such a big quake before."

"I wasn't scared when it started ... but it just kept going and going," said Michelle Roberts, who lives in central Tokyo. "I won't lie, it was quite scary. But we are all OK. We live on the third floor, so most everything shook."

"This was larger than anyone expected and went on longer than anyone expected," said Matt Alt, who lives in Tokyo. "My wife was the calm one ... she told us to get down and put your back on something, and leave the windows and doors open as long as the building shakes so you don't get trapped."
